Chapter Two Employment and Termination

Article Three Reporting Procedures New employees, upon receiving notification, shall complete the reporting procedures with the company on the designated start date. Failure to do so will be considered an automatic waiver of employment.

The notice is therefore invalid; the following documents should be presented upon arrival:

- (1) Submit the required documents and national identity card for verification (they will be returned after verification).
- (2) Certificate of termination of employment from the previous job (the most recent job termination date must be within three months).
- (3) Two-inch photo [electronic file acceptable].
- (4) A copy of the first bank account passbook.
- (5) A photocopy of the highest academic qualification certificate.
- (6) Medical examination report of new employees.

New employees who fail to submit all required documents and certificates upon reporting for duty will be deemed to have forfeited their employment. However, with the company's approval, they may not...

This is the limit.

Article 4 Labor Contract

Due to business needs, our company may sign fixed-term or indefinite-term contracts with employees when hiring them.

The aforementioned fixed-term and indefinite-term contracts shall be determined in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Labor Standards Act.

Article 5 Calculation of Employee Seniority The calculation method for employee seniority is stipulated as follows:

- (1) If a new contract is concluded or performance is continued within three months after the expiration of a fixed-term contract or the suspension of performance of an indefinite-term contract for any reason.

According to the original contract, the employee's years of service before and after the contract should be calculated together.

- (2) An employee's length of service is limited to the period of service with the company and is calculated from the date of employment. Prior to the application of the Labor Standards Act, employees already employed by the company...

The length of service at the company is calculated on a combined basis.

- (3) The length of service of employees transferred by the Company to related companies shall be recognized by the Company and shall be included in the total length of service.

Calculate.

Article 6 New Employees on Trial

Our company may agree to a probationary period with new employees. The length of the probationary period will be stipulated in a separate employment contract, except for those with special skills.

Special skills and experience, approved through a project-specific agreement, are not subject to this restriction. During the probationary period, both parties reserve the right to terminate the contract at any time.

This Agreement is hereby terminated. If the Company terminates this Agreement without giving sufficient notice or with an inadequate notice period, the Company shall also provide notice accordingly.

Pay the advance salary.

Those who pass the probationary period will be formally employed according to regulations. Those who fail the probationary period will have their employment terminated and will be dealt with according to Articles 7, 9, and 10.

In accordance with Articles 10 and 11 and other relevant regulations, wages shall be paid until the date of termination of employment.

Article 7 The Company shall not terminate an employment contract with advance notice unless one of the following circumstances applies:

- (1) When the business is closed or transferred.
- (2) When there are losses or business contraction.

(3) When work is suspended for more than one month due to force majeure.

(4) When the nature of the business changes, there is a need to reduce the number of employees, but there are no suitable jobs available for placement.

(5) When an employee is truly unable to perform the job assigned to him.

To protect the employment rights of employees in all departments, their department heads are not allowed to unilaterally express their intention to terminate the employment contract; all such terminations must be handled in accordance with the law.

The termination of the employment contract takes effect only after the Human Resources Manager signs off to the CEO for approval and notifies the employee.

Article 8. Exceptions to the Termination of Contract Restriction Period: During maternity leave or occupational injury medical treatment, the Company may not terminate the contract. However, if the Company is affected by natural disasters, accidents, or other unforeseen events...

If an employee's employment contract is terminated due to force majeure that prevents him from continuing his work, the employment contract may be terminated after approval by the competent authority.

Article 9 Notice of Termination When an employment contract is terminated in accordance with Article 7 or the proviso of the preceding article, the notice period shall be as follows:

(1) Those who continue to work for more than three months but less than one year shall be notified in advance ten days in advance.

(2) Those who continue to work for more than one year but less than three years shall be notified in advance 20 days in advance.

(3) Those who continue to work for more than three years shall be notified in advance thirty days in advance.

Employees may request leave during working hours to seek other employment after receiving the aforementioned notice. The number of hours of leave requested shall not exceed [amount missing] per week.

If the work period ends in two days, the salary for the leave period will be paid in full.

If the Company terminates the contract without giving notice within the period stipulated in Paragraph 1, it shall pay wages for the period of notice.

When an employee leaves the company, they must give notice within the period stipulated in Section 1. Failure to give notice or giving insufficient notice constitutes a breach of contract.

Regarding this contractual act, our company may pursue claims for compensation in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Civil Code. (Refer to the Ministry of the Interior's Labor Law Document No. 777-777)

(No. 513747)

Article 10 Issuance of severance pay

Employees whose employment contracts are terminated in accordance with the proviso of Articles 6, 7, or 8 shall be subject to prior notice as required, unless otherwise agreed upon.

In addition to paying wages for the period of notice as required by regulations, severance pay shall be paid within thirty days from the date of departure in accordance with the following provisions:

(1) For those who have worked before the application of the Labor Standards Act, the standard for severance pay shall be calculated in accordance with the applicable laws and regulations at that time.

If no applicable law is available at the time, the calculation shall be made in accordance with the company's own regulations or the agreement between the employer and employee.

(2) Length of service after the application of the Labor Standards Act and the choice to continue applying the "Labor Standards Act" in accordance with the Labor Retirement Fund Act.

For those who have served prior to the application of the Labor Retirement Pension Act, the severance pay standards are as follows:

1. Employees who continue to work for the company will receive a severance pay equivalent to one month's average salary for each full year of service.

2. For the remaining months calculated according to the preceding paragraph, or for those who have worked for less than one year, the payment shall be calculated proportionally. Less than one month shall be counted as one month.

(3) The standard for severance pay for the years of service under the Labor Retirement Pension Act (New Labor Retirement System) is determined by this company.

The company pays employees half a month's average salary for each full year of service; for those with less than a full year of service, the salary is calculated proportionally; the maximum is...

The payment shall be limited to six months' average salary.

The payment of severance pay under this clause does not apply to employees who resign voluntarily or whose fixed-term employment contracts expire under Article 11.

Article 11 Termination of Employment Contract Without Prior Notice, Reasons for Dismissal

The Company may terminate the contract of any employee without prior notice if the employee falls under any of the following circumstances:

Chapter Three Wages, Allowances and Bonuses Article

Sixteen Agreement on Wages

Employee wages are negotiated between the company and the employee. However, the employee's compensation during normal working hours shall not be lower than the basic wage. Funds.

Article 17 Definition of Wages

Wages refer to the remuneration an employee receives for their work; including wages, salaries, and payments made in cash or other forms of compensation based on hourly, daily, monthly, or piecework rates. Bonuses, allowances, and other regular payments made in kind or other forms.

Article 18. Time for Calculation and Payment of Wages

Our company's wage calculation method may adopt time-based, daily, monthly, or piece-rate systems as needed. Unless otherwise stipulated by law or agreed upon with the employee, the employee's wages shall be paid in full and directly to the employee. Employee salaries, with the employee's consent, are paid on the 10th of each month for the previous month. If the 10th falls on a holiday or leave day, the salary will be paid in advance, and advance payment should be made.

Provide a detailed breakdown of the calculation methods for each item of salary (i.e., payslip).

Article 19 Overtime Wage Standards

Overtime pay for normal working days:
For employees who work overtime, their overtime pay will be calculated according to the following standards:
(1) For those whose extended working hours are less than two hours, they shall be paid more than one-third of their usual hourly wage.
(2) If the working hours are extended by no more than two hours, the hourly wage shall be increased by more than two-thirds.
(3) If working hours are extended due to natural disasters, incidents or emergencies, the hourly wage shall be doubled.

Wages paid for work done on rest days:
Due to business needs, with the consent of employees, our company allows employees to work on rest days. For work hours of two hours or less, their wages will be calculated as per weekday wages.
An additional one and one-third or more will be added to the hourly wage; for those who continue working after two hours, the regular hourly wage will apply.
An additional one and two-thirds or more will be given.

Article 20. Allowances and Bonuses

Depending on its business performance, the Company may provide the following non-recurring preferential welfare rewards:
(1) Birthday bonus: When an employee is formally employed after the probationary period, the company will give him a birthday bonus.
(2) Wedding Gift: When a formally employed employee gets married after completing the probationary period, the company will pay a wedding gift, which will be paid in a lump sum.
limit.
(3) Maternity allowance: When an employee or his/her spouse gives birth after the probationary period, the company will give a maternity allowance.
(4) Funeral allowance: When the immediate family member or spouse of a formally employed employee who has completed the probationary period passes away, the company will provide a funeral allowance.
(5) Festival Bonuses: Bonuses for the Dragon Boat Festival and Mid-Autumn Festival will be awarded as gifts or cash prizes, with a maximum cash prize of $3,000.

The actual amount will be determined based on the operating conditions and will be announced before disbursement.

(6) Annual Performance Bonus: To boost morale and ensure excellent work performance, the company will award bonuses based on employees' work attitude and performance. Employees will be awarded annual performance bonuses based on their conduct, knowledge, and abilities.
The first four clauses above shall be handled uniformly by our company. Clauses 5 and 6 shall be handled by our company based on the current year's operating conditions.

Chapter Four Working Hours, Rest, Leave, and Leave of Absence Article

Twenty-One Working Hours

Employees' normal working hours shall not exceed eight hours per day and forty hours per week. Our company's working hours are as follows: daily working hours...

Work 8 hours:

- (1) Working hours: Monday to Friday, 9:00 am is the working hours.
- (2) Lunch time: Lunch time is from 12:30 to 13:30 on weekdays.
- (3) Off-get off work time: Monday to Friday, 18:00 is the off-get off work time.

Employees should provide services on time according to the work schedule arranged by their department. Employees may not change their work schedule without prior consent.

Our company may, as needed, implement changes in accordance with Article 30, Paragraph 2, Paragraph 3, or Article 30, Paragraph 1 of the Labor Standards Act.

Construction time.

According to Articles 21, 29, and 31 of the Occupational Safety and Health Law, working hours should be shortened upon the advice of a physician.

In addition, our company will consider the advice of physicians and adjust employees' working hours accordingly; if other regulations stipulate otherwise, our company will also comply.

Adjust working hours in accordance with laws and regulations.

For employees whose children are under two years old and require breastfeeding/collection, the company shall provide additional breastfeeding/collection time per day in addition to the stipulated rest time.

Sixty minutes between feedings. For employees working more than one hour outside of normal working hours, additional breastfeeding (collection) time will be provided.

Thirty minutes. Breastfeeding (or collection) time is considered working time.

Employees may request one of the following in order to support their children under the age of three:

- (1) Reduce working hours by one hour each day; no compensation shall be requested for the reduced working hours.
- (2) Adjust working hours.

When employees request the first two breastfeeding/collection breaks, or to reduce or adjust their working hours, the company shall not refuse or treat it as absence that affects their work.

Their full attendance bonus, performance evaluation, or other adverse penalties.

For employees who work outside the workplace due to business trips or other reasons, making it difficult to calculate their working hours, their usual working hours shall be used.

Working hours. However, if the actual working hours are proven, overtime pay may be applied for in accordance with regulations, but it should be calculated within three working days after the actual working hours.

Within the working day, apply for overtime work in accordance with regulations and submit it to the Human Resources Department to supplement the work hours.

Article 22 Extended Working Hours

If it is necessary for our company to require employees to work outside of normal working hours, the company may extend working hours with the consent of the labor-management meeting.

Of.

The extended working hours mentioned above, together with the normal working hours, shall not exceed twelve hours per day. The extended working hours shall be...

The duration shall not exceed forty-six hours per month.

In the event of natural disasters, accidents, or unforeseen circumstances, if it is necessary for the company to require employees to work outside of normal working hours, the company may extend the working hours...

The extended working hours may be reported to the local competent authority for record within 24 hours of the extension taking effect. The extended working hours shall be made public before the end of the working period.

Employees were given adequate rest afterwards.

An employee may be unable to accept work outside of normal working hours for health or other legitimate reasons, and the employer may not force the employee to work.

Following Article 22, when overtime is required due to work needs, in addition to employees who are normally required to work overtime according to company policy, employees working overtime should fill out an "Overtime Application Form," which must be approved by the responsible supervisor before being submitted to the employee for overtime work. For unapproved extended working hours, if the employee believes they are working hours under supervision, they should immediately report this by phone or notify their department supervisor upon completion of the service. Within three working days, they should complete an "Overtime Application Form" as required, which, after verification by the responsible supervisor, should be submitted to the Human Resources Department to supplement the working hours for overtime pay application.

Employees may choose, with the company's consent, to convert the overtime hours applied for under the preceding paragraph into compensatory time off, which must be taken within the period agreed upon by both parties. Any untaken time off due to the expiration of the compensatory time off period, the expiration of the contract, or the termination of the contract shall be handled by [the relevant authority/organization].

The company will pay wages according to the wage calculation standard for the day worked on extended working hours or rest days.

Compensatory time off as mentioned above shall be taken within the compensatory time off period following the occurrence of the event, in chronological order, and processed on a first-in, first-out basis. Wages for unused compensatory time off due to termination of the contract as mentioned above, together with any outstanding wages, shall be paid no later than the originally agreed wage payment date after the termination of the contract.

Article 24 Rest Period Employees who continue working for four hours should have at least 30 minutes of rest. However, for those working in shifts or whose work is continuous or urgent, the company may arrange rest time separately during working hours. To protect employees' right to rest, employees should rest for 30 minutes after working for four hours before continuing to provide services. If an employee believes that the services they provide are continuous or urgent and intends to continue providing them with the company's consent, the employee should arrange their own rest time during working hours. This rest time will be counted as working time.

Rest time, meal time, and commuting time are not included in the calculation of working time because the company does not have a command or supervision function. Article 25 Holidays Employees should have two days off every seven days, one of which is a regular holiday and the other is a rest day, with full pay. Rest days and regular holidays are not necessarily fixed on Saturdays and Sundays, and the two-day weekend is not necessarily consecutive. In principle, employees should not work more than six consecutive working days.

day.

If the company is designated as an applicable industry, and with the consent of the labor union; or if there is no labor union, and with the consent of the labor-management meeting, modified work arrangements may be implemented.

At that time, the restrictions of the preceding paragraph do not apply.

(1) If the normal working hours are changed in accordance with Article 30, Paragraph 2 of the Labor Standards Act, employees shall have at least one day of regular leave every seven days, and at least four days of regular leave and rest days within every two weeks. (2) If the normal working hours are changed in accordance with Article 30, Paragraph 3 of the Labor Standards Act, employees shall have at least one day of regular leave every seven days, and at least sixteen days of regular leave and rest days within every eight weeks. (3) If the normal working hours are changed in accordance with Article 30, Paragraph 1 of the Labor Standards Act, employees shall have at least two days of regular leave within every two weeks, and at least eight days of regular leave and rest days within every four weeks. The time that the Company requires employees to work on rest days shall be included in the total number of overtime hours stipulated in Article 32, Paragraph 2 of the Labor Standards Act. However, if it is necessary for the Company to require employees to work on rest days due to natural disasters, incidents, or emergencies, their working hours shall not be subject to the restrictions stipulated in Article 32, Paragraph 2 of the Labor Standards Act.

If an employee extends their working hours on a rest day to meet company needs, and the employee is absent from work from the beginning, both parties agree that the employee's attendance obligation on the rest day is automatically terminated, and the employee is not required to apply for leave, and the company will not pay overtime for that day. If an employee arrives at work but is unable to provide services for the originally agreed hours and must leave early, the employee does not need to apply for leave separately, and the "actual working hours" will be included in the total extended working hours for calculation. Overtime pay will be handled in accordance with Article 24 of the Labor Standards Act.

(Refer to the Ministry of Labor's letter dated May 3, 2017, Labor Standards Act No. 1060130987)

Article 26 Holidays All holidays, festivals, Labor Days, and other holidays designated by the Ministry of the Interior and other designated holidays by the central competent authorities shall be observed, and wages shall be paid as usual. The holidays mentioned above may be adjusted upon mutual agreement between the employer and employee.

Article 27 Special Leave Employees who continue to work for the same employer or institution for a certain period shall be granted special leave according to the following provisions: (1) Six months to one year: three days. (2) One year to two years: seven days. (3) Two years to three years: ten days. (4) Three years to five years: fourteen days per year. (5) Five years to ten years: fifteen days per year. (6) Ten years or more: one additional day per year, up to a maximum of thirty days. The length of service of the employee mentioned above shall be calculated from the date of employment; the special leave period shall be determined by the employee; the company shall inform the employee of the special leave arrangements when the employee meets the conditions for special leave stipulated in the preceding paragraph. However, due to urgent business needs or employee personal reasons, the company may negotiate adjustments with other parties. When employees exercise special leave, they must comply with the prohibition against abuse of rights and the principle of good faith stipulated in Article 148 of the Civil Code.

It is permissible for our company and employees to agree on staggered leave periods based on the year of service or to grant leave in advance; however, the leave standard must not be lower than the first provision. When an employee resigns voluntarily or their employment contract terminates, the number of special leave days will be calculated based on their actual years of service. If any leave days applied for exceed the statutory number, they should be deducted from the employee's salary for the most recent month or registered as personal leave. (Refer to the Ministry of Labor, 2016)

Labor Law No. 1050131754 dated August 2nd

For employees' special leave days not taken due to the end of the year or termination of the contract, the company will pay wages. However, if the number of days of special leave not taken due to the end of the year is deferred to the following year by mutual agreement between the employer and employee, the company will settle and pay wages for the remaining days not taken by the end of the following year or termination of the contract. Unused leave wages are calculated by multiplying the number of unused special leave days by one day's wage. The basis for calculating unused leave wages is the employee's normal working hours wage earned on the day before the end of the year or termination of the contract. For employees paid monthly, the calculation is the employee's normal working hours wage earned in the most recent month before the end of the year or termination of the contract, divided by thirty.

Unpaid wages due to the end of the year shall be paid within 30 days after the end of the year.

Unpaid wages due to contract termination shall be paid, together with any outstanding wages, no later than the originally agreed wage payment date (refer to the Ministry of Labor's letter dated December 20, 2013, Labor Law 2, No. 1020087966). The amount of wages paid for employees' special leave days and unused days each year shall be recorded by the company in the payroll annually.

The contents of these notices will be communicated to employees in writing regularly. Article 28. Work on Holidays: For regular holidays and rest days as stipulated in Article 25, holidays as stipulated in Article 26, and special holidays as stipulated in Article 27, wages will be paid in full. If an employee works on a holiday as stipulated in Articles 26 and 27 with the employee's consent, wages will be doubled. However, if an employee individually agrees to an adjustment, the original holiday (the day of the commemorative holiday) becomes a working day after the adjustment. Employees working on that day will not receive double wages, but the company shall provide compensatory leave afterward. Article 29. Termination of Leave: In the event of natural disasters, accidents, or emergencies, if the company deems it necessary to continue work, it may suspend the employee's leave stipulated in Articles 25 to 27. However, wages for the suspended leave will be doubled, and compensatory leave shall be provided afterward. Article 30 Regulations on Leave and Leave of Absence for Childbirth Employees may take leave for marriage, bereavement, illness or other legitimate reasons. Leave is divided into twelve categories: marriage leave, personal leave, general sick leave, physiological leave, bereavement leave, work-related sick leave, maternity leave, leave for pregnancy care, paternity leave, prenatal check-up leave, family care leave and public leave. The number of days of leave and salary payment are as follows:

(1) Marriage leave: Employees who get married are granted eight days of marriage leave, with full salary. Employees should take marriage leave within three months from ten days before the date of marriage registration, but with the prior consent of the company, they may take it within one year. Employees should submit a copy of their household registration certificate for marriage registration to the human resources department for filing within one month after returning to work. If the above certificate is not provided, the leave will be registered as special leave; if there is no special leave, it will be registered as personal leave. (2) Personal leave: Employees who need to handle matters personally may take personal leave; the total number of days of personal leave shall not exceed fourteen days within o They don't pay wages.

(3) General Sick Leave: Employees who require treatment or rest due to general injury, illness, or physiological reasons may apply for general sick leave in accordance with the following regulations. For leave of three days or more, a medical certificate must be submitted. (The total amount of general sick leave within one year shall not exceed...) For the 30-day period, wages will be paid at half the normal rate. (If the employee receives less than half the normal wage under the Labor Insurance Sick Leave program, the company will make up the difference.)

1. For those not hospitalized, the total sick leave period within one year shall not exceed 30 days. 2. For those hospitalized, the total sick leave period within two years shall not exceed one year. 3. The total sick leave period for both non-hospitalization and hospitalization shall not exceed one year within two years. If diagnosed with cancer (including carcinoma in situ) and treated on an outpatient basis, or if a pregnant woman requires rest and recuperation, the treatment or recuperation period will be included in the calculation of hospitalization sick leave. If ordinary sick leave exceeds the period stipulated in the preceding paragraph and the employee is still not fully recovered after offsetting with personal leave or special leave, the employee may be granted unpaid leave with the company's consent. Employees who are still not fully recovered after the expiration of the leave period may be dismissed. However, if the retirement pension system under the Labor Standards Act applies and the employee meets the retirement requirements, they should... A pension will be paid.

(6) Work-related injury and sick leave: Employees who become disabled, injured, or ill due to occupational accidents are entitled to work-related injury and sick leave during their treatment and recuperation period. If an employee applies for work-related injury and sick leave beyond a reasonable period, or if the diagnosis certificate provided is deemed questionable or inaccurate by the company, the company may pay for the expenses and require the employee to seek medical treatment at a public hospital. The company shall then instruct the employee to apply for leave based on the doctor's diagnosis certificate. Employees are obligated to accept any changes to their workplace, job, or shortened working hours. (Refer to Ministry of the Interior Document No. 374520 dated December 31, 1974, Council of Labor Document No. 4763 dated November 6, 1976, Article 21 of Occupational Safety and Health, and Article 15, Paragraph 1, Subparagraph 2 of the Labor Health Protection Regulations)

(7) Maternity Leave: 1. Female employees should stop working and be granted eight weeks of maternity leave before and after childbirth. 2.

Employees who miscarry after three months of pregnancy should stop working and be granted four weeks of maternity leave. 3.

Female employees who have been employed for more than six months as stipulated in items 1 and 2 shall continue to receive their full salary during the period of suspension of work; those who have been employed for less than six months shall receive half the salary. 4. Employees who miscarry after two months but less than three months of pregnancy should stop working and be granted one week of maternity leave. For the calculation of salary during maternity leave, if ordinary sick leave is requested according to the Labor Leave Regulations, half the salary shall be paid for the portion of ordinary sick leave not exceeding thirty days within one year. If requested according to the Gender Equality in Employment Act, no salary shall be paid, but it shall not be considered absenteeism and affect their full attendance bonus, performance evaluation, or other adverse penalties. 5. Employees who miscarry before two months of pregnancy should stop working and be granted five days of maternity leave. For the calculation of salary during maternity leave, if ordinary sick leave is requested in accordance with the Labor Leave Regulations, half of the salary will be paid for the portion of ordinary sick leave not exceeding 30 days within one year. If requested in accordance with the Gender Equality in Employment Act, no salary will be paid, but it shall not be regarded as absence and affect the full attendance bonus, performance evaluation or other adverse penalties. 6. Female employees must submit supporting documents when requesting maternity leave. (8) Leave for pregnancy care: If an employee needs to take leave for pregnancy care during pregnancy, the treatment or rest period shall be included in the hospitalization sick

Calculation. The calculation of salary for leave for pregnancy maintenance is handled in accordance with the regulations for sick leave.

(9) Paternity Leave: Employees are entitled to five days of paternity leave from the date of their spouse's delivery, which shall be within a total of fifteen days before and after the delivery date. Wages shall be paid in full during paternity leave. (10) Prenatal Check-up Leave: Employees are entitled to five days of prenatal check-up leave during pregnancy, with full pay. Employees may request leave by the hour or half-day as needed.

Chapter Seven Attendance, Performance Evaluation, Rewards and Punishments, and Promotion Article Forty-One Lateness and Early Departure

Employees should arrive and leave work on time and clock in/out as required. The regulations regarding lateness, early departure, and absenteeism are as follows:

(1) Employees who arrive within one minute of the scheduled start time are considered late. However, exceptions may be made with the approval of the supervisor.

Those who request leave on the same day will be considered to have taken leave.

(2) Anyone who leaves the workplace without cause within one minute before the scheduled end of the workday is considered to have left early.

(3) If you need to leave the office during working hours for official business, please fill out a "No Clocking Out Certificate" and obtain approval from your department head before leaving.

If an employee leaves their workplace or goes out without permission or proper leave procedures, that period of absence will be considered absenteeism.

(Career) Theory.

(4) For employees who are late by more than 10 minutes on a single day, a percentage of their salary will be deducted based on the number of minutes late on that day; the total number of minutes late for the entire month will also be deducted.

For late arrivals exceeding 30 minutes, a percentage of the total late minutes for the entire month will be deducted from the salary; the principle for deducting late arrivals is to avoid duplicates.

The deduction shall prevail.
